11 EDWARD SIALOI, et al.,

Case No. 11-cv-2280-W(KSC)

12 Plaintiffs,

13 v.

ORDER GRANTING IN PART
AND DENYING IN PART
DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT
[DOC. 36]

14 CITY OF SAN DIEGO, et al.,

15 Defendants.
16

17 On October 1, 2011, Plaintiffs commenced this civil-rights action against 18 Defendants, which includes the City of San Diego and several police officers, arising 19 from a contact between the officers and Plaintiffs on October 2, 2010.¹ Now pending 20 before the Court is Defendants' motion for summary judgment. Plaintiffs oppose.

21 The Court decides the matter on the papers submitted and without oral 22 argument. See Civ. L.R. 7.1(d.1). For the following reasons, the Court GRANTS IN 23 PART and DENIES IN PART Defendants' motion for summary judgment.
24

26 ¹ The plaintiffs in this action are Edward Sialoi, Kelli Sialoi, Sialoi ("Junior") Sialoi, Jr., 27 September Sialoi, Foleni Sialoi, Gayle Pasi, Lago Sialoi, Liua Sialoi, Hardy Teo Falealili, Tapili Sofa, 28 and minors G.S., T.O.S., T.A.S., T.R.S., and B.F. The defendants in this action are the City of San Diego, Allen Sluss, Bradley Phelps, Joseph Krawczyk, David Rohowits, Anthony Reese, Michael Hall,
Edward Kaszycki, Corey Stasch, Miguel Garcia, Michael Hayes, Wade Irwin, Scott Smith, Kelvin Lujan, and John Carroll. The Court will refer to all plaintiffs collectively as "Plaintiffs" and all defendants collectively as "Defendants."

1 I. BACKGROUND²

2 On October 2, 2010, at 10:22 p.m., the manager of the apartment complex
3 located at 404 47th Street in San Diego called 9-1-1 to report “two black or Samoan 4 males carrying a shotgun and a handgun, ducking down” as if waiting for somebody.
5 (CAD 1; Sluss Dep. 40:3–9.) The apartment manager called back two minutes later 6 to clarify that both suspects are black males, one with bushy hair and wearing a brown 7 T-shirt, and the other wearing a long-sleeved T-shirt with a hood. (CAD 1.) The 8 apartment manager’s 9-1-1 calls coincided with a birthday gathering hosted by Junior 9 Sialoi and his wife, September Sialoi, on the ground floor of the 47th Street apartment 10 complex. (Lago Sialoi Decl. ¶ 2; Sluss Dep. 40:3–9.) People attending the party were 11 “having coffee and birthday cake, singing songs and enjoying each other’s company.”
12 (Edward Sialoi Decl. ¶ 4.)

13 Sgt. Allen Todd Sluss was in charge of the response to the apartment manager’s 14 9-1-1 call. (Sluss Dep. 44:10–20; see also CAD 1.) Sgt. Sluss assembled an initial 15 contact team consisting of “maybe six officers, and then [he] put Officer Doeden with 16 a team of four and had them take another path.” (Sluss Dep. 49:3–15.) At about 10:30 17 p.m., the “initial contact team came up the driveway,” while the second team “circle[d] 18 around from the north.” (Id.; CAD 2.) The remainder of what transpired is disputed 19 by the parties.

20 According to Defendants, contact with Plaintiffs began when Officer Wayne 21 Doeden saw the 15-year-old G.S. throw what appeared to be a gun under a truck in the 22 apartment parking lot. (Doeden Dep. 40:1–42:20; G.S. Dep. 51:2–19; Lago Sialoi Decl.
23 ¶¶ 5–8.) Officer Doeden then pointed his light on the object thrown under the truck 24 and called out to the other officers, “Gun under the truck.” (Doeden Dep. 42:2–22, 25 45:20–46:13.) G.S. tried to explain that the gun is “fake” and that “it’s just a toy,” but 26

27
28 ² The Court GRANTS Defendants’ unopposed request for judicial notice of the computer assisted dispatch printout (“CAD”) under Federal Rule of Evidence 201(b) because its “accuracy cannot reasonably be questioned.” (Doc. 36-2.) The CAD printout is attached to Defendants’ motion as Exhibit 2.

1 Officer Doeden shouted “it’s real” to the other officers. (Id. at 45:20–46:13, 49:2–50:21; 2 G.S. Dep. 55:2–23.) While this exchange was occurring, one or more persons moved 3 from the nearby crowd outside into the apartment, creating a greater concern that 4 weapons or other suspects were moved into the apartment. (Krawczyk Dep. 35:1–19, 5 52:7–24, 80:14–81:25; Doeden Dep. 81:5–24, 82:15–84:1.) Following police 6 commands, three males laid on the ground, were handcuffed, and put into patrol cars.
7 (B.F. Dep. 39:14–17; G.S. Dep. 54:11–20; T.O.S. Dep. 28:10–14.) Securing these 8 three individuals took about two minutes. (CAD 2.)

9 Police officers then started securing the other individuals who were near where 10 the gun was thrown. (Doeden Dep. 55:18–57:14, 59:3–20.) They first “called out,” 11 one by one, the nine people gathered in front of the apartment. (Sluss Dep.
12 161:16–162:5, Krawczyk Dep. 54:3–15; CAD 2.) These individuals were handcuffed, 13 patted down, and moved approximately thirty to forty feet from the gun and the 14 apartment. (Sluss Dep. 161:16–162:5; Krawczyk Dep. 74:20–75:11.) Junior Sialoi was 15 among these nine individuals, and according to Defendants, he was particularly unruly, 16 refusing to put his hands up in the air and failing to heed his family’s pleas to calm 17 down. (Doeden Dep. 63:10–64:14, 86:21–24; Sialoi Sialoi Dep. 48:14–49:18, 75:1–19; 18 79:7–80:25.) Next, police instructed two women and one child still inside the 19 apartment to come outside one by one. (Doeden Dep. 81:5–84:23.) These individuals 20 were not handcuffed, but patted down and escorted to the group of others previously 21 secured. (Sluss Dep. 121:23–122:12, 130:5–12.)

22 From 10:43 p.m. to 10:44 p.m., police officers conducted a protective sweep of 23 the apartment. (CAD 2; Sluss Dep. 164:2–6.) Seventeen minutes after seeing the male 24 with a gun in his hand, police uncuffed all of the individuals who had been restrained.
25 (Sluss Dep. 165:4–10; CAD 3.)

26 Plaintiffs present the events that transpired differently. According to Plaintiffs, 27 police officers with guns drawn first encountered 13-year-old B.F. and then 15-year-old 28 T.O.S. (Sialoi Sialoi Decl. ¶ 6.) B.F. was in an open parking lot with nothing in his

1 hands when the officers approached. (B.F. Dep. 39:18–40:9, 41:25–42:2.) Officers 2 coming up the driveway with guns pointed at the minors “all screamed” to “[g]et on the 3 ground.” (Id. at 45:6–46:24; Sialoi Sialoi Decl. ¶ 6.) Once B.F. was on the ground, he 4 felt a knee on his back as an officer handcuffed him. (B.F. Dep. 52:3–25.) The officer
5 then instructed B.F. to get up, but he could not because his hands were handcuffed 6 behind his back. (Id.) Shortly thereafter, the officer “yanked” B.F. up, patted him 7 down, and put him inside of a police car.” (Id.)

8 T.O.S. was standing “a couple feet away” from B.F. when the group of police 9 officers approached. (B.F. Dep. 41:17–24.) He also had nothing in his hands. (Id.)
10 From the ground, T.O.S. observed a police officer picking up the weapon—which the 11 parties appear to agree was actually a paintball gun—and saying that he “found the gun 12 . . . found the weapon,” despite multiple attempts by T.O.S.’s father to inform the 13 officer that “[i]t was a toy gun.” (T.O.S. Dep. 73:3–25; Lago Sialoi Decl. ¶ 5.) T.O.S.
14 was then “told to face forward while the officer came and kneed [his] neck” and told 15 him to put his arms behind his back. (T.O.S. Dep. 73:11–16.) T.O.S. felt pain as well 16 as tingling and numbness in both of his hands because of the handcuffs, but after he told 17 officers of the pain and asked them to loosen the handcuffs, they responded that he had 18 to “deal with it.” (Id. at 76:12–77:24.) Out of fear that the officers “might do 19 something,” T.O.S. did not complain any further. (Id. at 77:16–24.) While officers 20 restrained T.O.S., they had weapons pointed at him, including “the barrel of the 21 officer’s gun only an inch or so from T.O.S.’s head,” and an “AR-15 pointed right at 22 him from only a foot or two away.” (Sialoi Sialoi Decl. ¶ 10; G.S. Dep. 83:6–84:16.)

23 Fifteen-year-old G.S. “was in between two trucks” near B.F. and T.O.S. (B.F.
24 Dep. 41:19–21.) When the minors first saw the police officers approaching, G.S. had 25 a plastic paintball gun in his hand. (Id. at 42:8–14; G.S. Dep. 73:2–11.) At some point 26 after the police officers engaged the minors, G.S. dropped the paintball gun. (Lago 27 Sialoi ¶ 6.) They “yell[ed] at G.S. to get down” with guns pointed him, and G.S.
28 immediately complied and got down on the ground. (Id. ¶¶ 7–8.) G.S.’s father also

1 told G.S. to get down. (Id.) While he was on the ground, G.S. continued to explain 2 that the weapon is not a real gun but rather a toy paintball gun, to which a police 3 officer responded, “I don’t care, just crawl out.” (G.S. Dep. 80:10–21.) However, 4 another officer instructed G.S. to “get down and put [his] hands in front,” which he did.
5 (Id. at 55:2–23.) With his hands out while on the ground, G.S. asked how he is 6 supposed to crawl out, and one of the officers told him to “use your face.” (Id.)
7 Eventually, G.S. crawled out, and then he was handcuffed and taken away. (Lago Sialoi 8 ¶ 10.)

9 While the three minors were on the ground in handcuffs, the police officers 10 began ordering other Sialoi family members, “one at a time, to walk out to them, where 11 officers searched and handcuffed them.” (Lago Sialoi Decl. ¶ 11; see also Edward Sialoi 12 Decl. ¶ 3; Sialoi Sialoi Decl. ¶ 12.) The family members searched and handcuffed 13 included two women, Liua Sialoi and September Sialoi, and 13-year-old T.A.S. (Lago 14 Sialoi Decl. ¶ 11.) During the whole process of searching and handcuffing the other 15 Sialoi family members, police officers had their guns drawn and pointed at them.
16 (Edward Sialoi Decl. ¶ 9.) Edward Sialoi even observed “red laser dots” on his brother 17 Junior Sialoi and his 13-year-old niece T.A.S., who was also handcuffed and attempted 18 to inform an officer that the handcuffs were causing pain. (Id.; see also T.A.S. Dep.
19 56:19–58:3, 93:1–24.) Liua Sialoi was pregnant at the time. (Liua Sialoi Dep.
20 101:12–103:22.)

21 Upon the officers’ instructions, Foleni Sialoi walked out to the officers first, was 22 searched, handcuffed, and taken to the curb. (Edward Sialoi Decl. ¶¶ 10–14; Lago 23 Sialoi ¶¶ 11–15; Sialoi Sialoi Decl. ¶¶ 12–16.) Next, Junior Sialoi was ordered out.
24 (Id.) Then Edward Sialoi. (Id.) Edward Sialoi informed the officers that he had a 25 medical condition and that he recently had back surgery, prompting him to request that 26 the officers use two sets of handcuffs. (Edward Sialoi ¶ 13.) However, when he got to 27 the officer, the officer “grabbed [his] right hand and violently yanked [his] back arm 28 back and up behind [him], causing excruciating pain in [his] shoulder.” (Id.) Edward

1 Sialoi heard a “loud pop in [his] shoulder.” (Id.) Thereafter, officers ordered the 2 remaining people in the apartment to come out, including Kelli Sialoi, Gayle Pasi, 7-3 year-old T.R.S., and Gayle Pasi’s 3-year-old nephew. (Id. ¶ 15.) Neither Kelli Sialoi
4 nor Gayle Pasi were patted down or handcuffed. (Id.) Officers directed all of the family
5 members to wait on the curb, except for Junior Sialoi who was taken to a police car 6 with the three minors detained earlier. (Edward Sialoi Decl. ¶ 14–15; Lago Sialoi Decl.
7 ¶¶ 15–16; Sialoi Sialoi Decl. ¶ 14.)

8 Without consent or a search warrant, three or four police officers then walked 9 into Junior Sialoi’s apartment, and after about five minutes, came out. (Sialoi Sialoi 10 Decl. ¶ 16; Edward Sialoi Decl. ¶ 15.) After about 30 to 40 minutes, everyone was 11 released. (Lago Sialoi Decl. ¶ 17.) The following Monday, Edward Sialoi went to 12 urgent care for treatment because of severe and constant pain in his shoulder and 13 biceps area. (Edward Sialoi Decl. ¶ 18.) Eventually, he was referred to an orthopedic 14 surgeon who conducted an MRI examination, which showed that Edward Sialoi had a 15 torn rotator cuff and torn labrum in his shoulder. (Id.) During the subsequent surgery, 16 it was determined that there was a torn biceps tendon, which was also repaired during 17 the surgery. (Id.) The following Wednesday, Junior Sialoi went to the San Diego Police 18 Department in Downtown San Diego to get the police reports relating to this incident, 19 but was informed that there were no such reports. (Sialoi Sialoi Decl. ¶ 17.)

20 On October 3, 2011, Plaintiffs commenced this civil-rights action in federal 21 court. In the complaint, Plaintiffs assert claims: (1) constitutional violations for 22 unlawful search and seizure and excessive force under 42 U.S.C. § 1983; (2)
23 constitutional violations for unlawful policies, customs or habits under 42 U.S.C. § 24 1983; (3) negligence; (4) assault and battery; (5) false arrest / false imprisonment; and 25 (6) civil-rights violations under California Civil Code § 52.1(b). Plaintiffs subsequently 26 amended their complaint twice, asserting the same claims. Plaintiffs bring all of their 27 claims against all of the defendants, except the claim for unlawful search and seizure, 28 and excessive force, which is brought against “all individually named defendants,” and

1 the claim for unlawful policies, customs or habits, which is brought against the City of 2 San Diego. Defendants now move for full or partial summary judgment. Plaintiffs 3 oppose.

4 5 II. LEGAL STANDARD

6 Summary judgment is appropriate under Rule 56(c) where the moving party 7 demonstrates the absence of a genuine issue of material fact and entitlement to 8 judgment as a matter of law. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c); Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 9 U.S. 317, 322 (1986). A fact is material when, under the governing substantive law, 10 it could affect the outcome of the case. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 11 248 (1986); Freeman v. Arpaio, 125 F.3d 732, 735 (9th Cir. 1997). A dispute about 12 a material fact is genuine if “the evidence is such that a reasonable jury could return a 13 verdict for the nonmoving party.” Anderson, 477 U.S. at 248.

14 A party seeking summary judgment always bears the initial burden of establishing 15 the absence of a genuine issue of material fact. Celotex, 477 U.S. at 323. The moving 16 party can satisfy this burden in two ways: (1) by presenting evidence that negates an 17 essential element of the nonmoving party’s case; or (2) by demonstrating that the 18 nonmoving party failed to make a showing sufficient to establish an element essential 19 to that party’s case on which that party will bear the burden of proof at trial. Id. at 322-
 20 23. “Disputes over irrelevant or unnecessary facts will not preclude a grant of summary 21 judgment.” T.W. Elec. Serv., Inc. v. Pac. Elec. Contractors Ass’n, 809 F.2d 626, 630 22 (9th Cir. 1987).

23 “The district court may limit its review to the documents submitted for the 24 purpose of summary judgment and those parts of the record specifically referenced 25 therein.” Carmen v. San Francisco Unified Sch. Dist., 237 F.3d 1026, 1030 (9th Cir.
 26 2001). Therefore, the court is not obligated “to scour the record in search of a genuine 27 issue of triable fact.” Keenan v. Allen, 91 F.3d 1275, 1279 (9th Cir. 1996) (citing 28 Richards v. Combined Ins. Co. of Am., 55 F.3d 247, 251 (7th Cir. 1995)). If the

1 moving party fails to discharge this initial burden, summary judgment must be denied 2 and the court need not consider the nonmoving party's evidence. Adickes v. S.H. Kress 3 & Co., 398 U.S. 144, 159-60 (1970).

4 If the moving party meets this initial burden, the nonmoving party cannot defeat 5 summary judgment merely by demonstrating "that there is some metaphysical doubt as 6 to the material facts." Matsushita Electric Indus. Co., Ltd. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475
7 U.S. 574, 586 (1986); Triton Energy Corp. v. Square D Co., 68 F.3d 1216, 1221 (9th 8 Cir. 1995) ("The mere existence of a scintilla of evidence in support of the nonmoving 9 party's position is not sufficient.") (citing Anderson, 477 U.S. at 242, 252). Rather, the 10 nonmoving party must "go beyond the pleadings" and by "the depositions, answers to 11 interrogatories, and admissions on file," designate "specific facts showing that there is 12 a genuine issue for trial." Celotex, 477 U.S. at 324 (quoting Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e)).

13 When making this determination, the court must view all inferences drawn from 14 the underlying facts in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. See 15 Matsushita, 475 U.S. at 587. "Credibility determinations, the weighing of evidence, and 16 the drawing of legitimate inferences from the facts are jury functions, not those of a 17 judge, [when] he [or she] is ruling on a motion for summary judgment." Anderson, 477 18 U.S. at 255.

19 Rule 56(d) provides for partial summary judgment. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(d) 20 ("[T]he court . . . shall if practicable ascertain what material facts exist without 21 substantial controversy and what material facts are actually and in good faith 22 controverted."). Under Rule 56(d), the court may grant summary judgment on less 23 than the non-moving party's whole claim. Zapata Hermanos Sucesores, S.A. v.
24 Hearthside Baking Co., Inc., 313 F.3d 385, 391 (7th Cir. 2002) (Posner, J.). Partial 25 summary judgment is a mechanism through which the court deems certain issues 26 established before trial. Lies v. Farrell Lines, Inc., 641 F.2d 765, 769 n.3 (9th Cir.
27 1981). "The procedure was intended to avoid a useless trial of facts and issues over 28 which there was really never any controversy and which would tend to confuse and 1 complicate a lawsuit.” Id.

2 3 III. DISCUSSION

4 A. Civil Rights Violations Under 42 U.S.C. § 1983

5 To state a claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, a plaintiff must allege two essential 6 elements: (1) that a right secured by the Constitution or laws of the United States was 7 violated, and (2) that the alleged violation was committed by a person acting under the 8 color of state law. West v. Atkins, 487 U.S. 42, 28 (1988). Section 1983 is not itself 9 a source of substantive rights, but merely provides “a method for vindicating federal 10 rights elsewhere conferred.” Graham v. Connor, 490 U.S. 386, 393-94 (1989) (quoting 11 Baker v. McCollan, 443 U.S. 137, 144 n.3 (1979)). Plaintiffs contend that Defendants 12 violated their Fourth Amendment rights as a result of the police officers’ unlawful 13 searches and arrests, use of excessive force during the arrests, and unlawful search of 14 Junior Sialoi’s apartment. They also contend that there was a deprivation of 15 constitutional rights as a result of the City of San Diego’s policies, customs, and habits.

16 17 1. Unlawful Searches and Arrests

18 Warrantless arrest without probable cause violates the Fourth Amendment.
19 Beck v. Ohio, 379 U.S. 89, 91 (1964); Dubner v. City & Cnty. of San Francisco, 266 20 F.3d 959, 964 (9th Cir. 2001). “Probable cause exists when, at the time of arrest, the 21 agents know reasonably trustworthy information sufficient to warrant a prudent person 22 in believing that the accused had committed or was committing an offense.” Allen v.
23 City of Portland, 73 F.3d 232, 237 (9th Cir. 1995) (quotation marks and citation 24 omitted). Where the source of police information about a suspect is an eyewitness to 25 the crime, probable cause to arrest the suspect may exist even in the absence of an 26 independent showing of the reliability of the source so long as the witness is fairly 27 certain of the identification. See United States v. Hammond, 666 F.2d 435, 439 (9th 28 Cir. 1982). Additionally, probable cause must be individualized to the specific person

1 arrested. Maryland v. Pringle, 540 U.S. 366, 371 (2003).

2 A detention is less intrusive than an arrest, and requires a lesser standard of 3 “reasonable suspicion” of unlawful activity for officers to detain lawfully. Washington 4 v. Lambert, 98 F.3d 1181, 1185 (9th Cir. 1996). A detention is often indicated by less 5 aggressive tactics and less force used by officers. Id. Additionally, if the suspects are 6 uncooperative, an officer’s behavior will more likely constitute a detention rather than 7 in arrest. Allen v. City of Los Angeles, 66 F.3d 1052, 1057 (9th Cir. 1995) (holding 8 that a driver’s high speed and refusal to pull over constituted enough resistance to 9 establish officer conduct as a detention, only requiring reasonable suspicion for a the 10 officers to lawfully detain).

11 Defendants argue that Officer Doeden “had a reasonable belief that a gun crime 12 was committed” when he saw G.S. throw a gun that “he reasonably [] believed to be a 13 real gun.” (Defs.’ Mot. 9:9–15.) They contend that “[t]he police actions flowed from 14 Officer Doeden’s conclusion that a gun crime was committed[,]” and “[t]he safety 15 precautions of [the] police were reasonable under these circumstances.” (Id.) In 16 addition to Officer Doeden’s conduct when he approached G.S. and found the gun, 17 Defendants also identify other relevant facts that purportedly justify their conduct, such 18 as the urgency of the 9-1-1 gun call, being “shorthanded relative to the three males with 19 a gun in the parking lot[,]” the numerous suspects outside the apartment during the 20 contact, the unknown number of suspects inside the apartment, the suspects’ verbal 21 chatter, and movement of suspects in the “earliest moments of this event.” (Id. at 22 13:23–14:7.)

23 Plaintiffs respond by identifying two purported “key facts” that Defendants fail 24 to address: (1) the gun that G.S. was holding was a toy, and (2) officers confirmed it was 25 a toy at the beginning, “within seconds of their arrival.” (Pls.’ Opp’n 8:13–15.) They 26 continue that “[f]ollowing the discovery of the toy gun, officers lacked reasonable 27 suspicion to believe that any of the plaintiffs were involved in criminal activity[,]” and 28 “they certainly had no reasonable belief that any plaintiff was armed and dangerous.”

1 (Id. at 8:16–19.) Plaintiffs contend that “[n]o plaintiff did anything unlawful or made 2 any type of furtive movements suggesting they were armed or dangerous.” (Id. at 3 8:20–9:5.) They also direct to the Court’s attention to the fact that the apartment 4 manager updated his description of the suspects two minutes after the initial 9-1-1 call, 5 describing two black males instead, one in a brown short-sleeve T-shirt with bushy hair
6 and the other in a long-sleeve T-shirt with a hood. (See CAD 1.)

7 The parties present different and competing narratives of the events that 8 transpired on the evening of October 2, 2010 in and near Junior Sialoi’s apartment.
9 Defendants present evidence that the police officers were entering an unknown and 10 potentially dangerous situation following the 9-1-1 “gun call.” And it is that potential 11 danger that justified the decision to have multiple officers on the scene in order to 12 investigate threats and assure the safety of everyone. Plaintiffs present evidence that 13 the police officers on the scene knew that there was no threat from Plaintiffs when they 14 discovered early on that the gun in question was a toy paintball gun. Adding to that 15 narrative is the undisputed fact that the police received an update from the 9-1-1 caller 16 that the suspects were two black males. The parties appear not to dispute that the 17 group of minors who the police officer may have presumed were the suspects in question 18 were neither black nor two in number; B.F, T.O.S., and G.S. simply did not match the 19 updated description. Though there are other relevant facts to consider, some disputed 20 and some not, these are the inferences that the parties ask the Court to make from their 21 evidence.

22 Drawing all of the inferences in light most favorable to the nonmoving party, the 23 Court cannot conclude that Defendants are entitled to summary judgment. See 24 Matsushita, 475 U.S. at 587. For the Court to reach the conclusion that the police 25 officers’ conduct was justified by probable cause or reasonable suspicion would require 26 credibility determinations, the weighing of evidence, and the drawing of inferences from 27 the facts. See Anderson, 477 U.S. at 355. Those considerations are not appropriate 28 for the Court when ruling on a motion for summary judgment. See id. Consequently,

1 there is a genuine issue of material fact regarding the justification of the police officers' 2 conduct, including probable cause and reasonable suspicion. See id. The scope of the 3 officers' conduct in question includes the aforementioned searches and arrests.

4 Defendants also dispute that the police officers "arrested" Plaintiffs. (Defs.' Mot.
5 14:8–13.) For the same reasons that the Court finds there is a genuine issue of material 6 fact as to the justification of the police officers' conduct, the Court also finds that there 7 is a genuine issue of material fact as to whether Plaintiffs were arrested or merely 8 detained. See Washington, 98 F.3d at 1185-92. For simplicity, and because the Court 9 draws all inferences in favor of the nonmoving party, the Court shall refer to any 10 restraint described by the parties in this order as an "arrest."

11 Accordingly, the Court DENIES summary judgment as to Plaintiffs' unlawful 12 search and arrest claim brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. See Dubner, 266 F.3d at 964; 13 Washington, 98 F.3d at 1185.

14 15 2. Excessive Force

16 Use of excessive force violates the Fourth Amendment when the force applied 17 is greater than is reasonable under the circumstances. Santos v. Gates, 287 F. 3d 846, 18 854 (9th Cir. 2002). Excessive force is an objective determination that can include 19 pointing guns at unarmed individuals, use of handcuffs, or force of any kind if a fact-20 finder determines it was not necessary to an objectively reasonable police officer in the 21 circumstances. Graham, 490 U.S. at 397; Espinosa v. City & Cnty. of San Francisco, 22 598 F.3d 528, 538 (9th Cir. 2010); Palmer v. Sanderson, 9 F.3d 1433, 1436 (9th Cir.
23 1993). "[S]ummary judgment . . . in excessive force cases should be granted sparingly." 24 Luchtel v. Hagemann, 623 F.3d 975, 980 (9th Cir. 2010) (quoting Smith v. City of 25 Hemet, 394 F.3d 689, 701 (9th Cir. 2005)) (internal quotation marks omitted).

26 Whether an individual has been subjected to excessive force under the Fourth 27 Amendment requires consideration of the reasonableness standard set forth in Graham.
28 490 U.S. at 395. To determine whether officers used excessive force during an arrest,

1 courts balance “the nature and quality of the intrusion on the individual’s Fourth 2 Amendment interests against the countervailing governmental interests at stake,” 3 looking to (1) the severity of the crime at issue, (2) whether the plaintiff posed an 4 immediate threat to the safety of the officers or others, and (3) whether the plaintiff 5 actively resisted arrest or attempted to evade arrest by flight. Id. (internal quotation 6 marks omitted). The threat posed by the suspect is the most important factor. Smith, 7 394 F.3d at 689. Then the court must consider the totality of the circumstances and 8 weigh the gravity of the intrusion against the government’s interest in order to 9 determine whether the force employed was constitutionally reasonable. Miller v. Clark 10 Cnty., 340 F.3d 959, 964 (9th Cir. 2003). “[R]easonableness’ of a particular use of 11 force must be judged from the perspective of a reasonable officer on the scene, rather 12 than with the 20/20 vision of hindsight.” Id. at 396.

13 When weighing an excessive-force claim, summary judgment is appropriate if the 14 Court “concludes, after resolving all factual disputes in favor of the plaintiff, that the 15 officer’s use of force was objectively reasonable under the circumstances.” Scott v.
16 Heinrich, 39 F.3d 912, 915 (9th Cir. 1994). Alternatively, “the court may make a 17 determination as to the reasonableness where, viewing the evidence in the light most 18 favorable to [the plaintiff], the evidence compels the conclusion that [the officers’] use 19 of force was reasonable.” Hopkins v. Andaya, 958 F.2d 881, 885 (9th Cir. 1992). The 20 Court can therefore grant summary judgment if the force the officers used was 21 appropriate in any circumstance, or if the circumstances in the specific case were such 22 that the only conclusion is that the force was reasonable.

23 Defendants argue that the “[t]he use of force arose from safety concerns, not 24 merely a reasonable suspicion of a crime.” (Defs.’ Mot. 4:14–18, 13:23–14:27.) They 25 also contend that Plaintiffs’ contention that the handcuffs were too tight is a separate 26 and distinct issue from whether the handcuffs were lawfully used. (Id. at 5:1–2.)
27 However, the only analysis that Defendants provide conflates their argument addressing 28 the purported justified searches and arrests with the purported justified application of 1 force. (See Defs.’ Mot. 11:18–14:27; Defs.’ Reply 9:15–19.) Defendants do separately 2 argue that the application of force in handcuffing Edward Sialoi was justified. (Id. at 3 17:11–21.) Notwithstanding Edward Sialoi, it appears Defendants link their excessive-4 force argument to the presumption that there was probable cause or reasonable 5 suspicion to justify the officers’ conduct. (See id. at 9:9–15 (“The police actions flowed

6 from Officer Doeden’s conclusion that a gun crime was committed. The safety 7 precautions of police were reasonable under these circumstances.”).) In response, 8 Plaintiffs argue that factual disputes exists regarding excessive force. They highlight the 9 application of force to Edward Sialoi as well as the “excessively tight handcuffs” applied
10 to and the pointing of guns at Defendants. (Pls.’ Opp’n 14:1–16:14.)

11 According to Defendants, after Edward Sialoi notified officers of his pre-existing 12 right shoulder injury, “his hands were on his head and [] an officer pulled his right arm 13 down from head area to lower back area.” (Defs.’ Mot. 17:11–21.) They argue this 14 application of force was not unreasonable outside the expected use of handcuffs. (Id.)
15 Plaintiffs add that Edward Sialoi had requested two sets of handcuffs, that he heard a 16 loud “pop,” that his arm was “twisted [] fast and hard to the point where [he] heard 17 [his] shoulder pop,” and that when his handcuffs were being removed later, another 18 officer yanked up his cuffed wrists, causing more pain. (Pls.’ Opp’n 14:8–21.) The 19 circumstances surrounding Edward Sialoi’s interaction remain in dispute. In particular, 20 it is disputed what threat, if any, Edward Sialoi posed to the officers. See Graham, 490
21 U.S. at 395. Furthermore, the unresolved question of whether the police officers’ 22 conduct was justified—by probable cause, reasonable suspicion, or some other 23 theory—my impact the answer of how much force was reasonable in this circumstance.

24 In sum, the Court DENIES summary judgment as to Plaintiffs’ excessive-force 25 claim brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 because material facts remain in dispute 26 regarding, in part, Edward Sialoi’s interaction with police officers as well as the 27 application of handcuffs to and the pointing of guns at Defendants throughout the 28 encounter. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c); Celotex, 477 U.S. at 322. Summary judgment

1 is also inappropriate because the justification for Defendant's encounter with 2 Plaintiffs—e.g., probable cause and reasonable suspicion—remain in dispute as well.
3 See id.

4 5 3. Unlawful Search of Junior Sialoi's Apartment

6 "It is a 'basic principle of Fourth Amendment law' that searches and seizures 7 inside a home without a warrant are presumptively unreasonable." Payton v. New 8 York, 445 U.S. 573, 586 (1980). "The Fourth Amendment prohibits police officers 9 from making a warrantless entry into a person's home, unless the officers have probable 10 cause and are presented with exigent circumstances." LaLonde v. Cnty. of Riverside, 11 204 F.3d 947, 954 (9th Cir. 2000) (emphasis in original).

12 "[A]s an incident to the arrest[,], the officers could, as a precautionary matter and 13 without probable cause or reasonable suspicion, look in closets and other spaces 14 immediately adjoining the place of arrest from which an attack could be immediately 15 launched." Maryland v. Buie, 494 U.S. 325, 334 (1990). "Beyond that, however . . .
16 there must be articulable facts which, taken together with the rational inferences from 17 those facts, would warrant a reasonably prudent officer in believing that the area to be 18 swept harbors an individual posing a danger to those on the arrest scene." Id. For 19 example, "a law enforcement officer present in a home under lawful process, such as an 20 order permitting or directing the officer to enter for the purpose of protecting a third 21 party, may conduct a protective sweep when the officer possesses [the aforementioned 22 'articulable facts']." United States v. Miller, 430 F.3d 93, 98 (2d Cir. 2005) (citing 23 Buie, 494 U.S. at 334).

24 Defendants argue that a preventative sweep of a residence without a warrant 25 based upon safety concerns is permissible. (Defs.' Mot. 15:23–17:10.) They present 26 two grounds to justify the search: (1) "[t]here were, incident to the probable cause to 27 arrest G.S. for a gun crime, exigent circumstances to search the apartment for other 28 persons posing an imminent danger to police standing outside the apartment"; and (2)

1 “the officers had reasonable suspicion of criminal activity by these Plaintiffs.” (Defs.’ 2 Reply 6:19–8:18.) As discussed above, the basis to find either probable cause or 3 reasonable suspicion remains in dispute. Consequently, neither justifies the police 4 officers’ search of the apartment for the purposes of summary judgment. See LaLonde, 5 204 F.3d at 954; see also Miller, 430 F.3d at 98.

6 Additionally, inferences drawn in favor of Plaintiffs suggest that there were no 7 exigent circumstances. Plaintiffs provide evidence that no crime had been committed, 8 and no crime was in progress. Officer Sluss even testified that he did not see anything 9 in the hands of anybody other than one person—presumably, G.S.—and that everyone 10 on the scene was “compliant physically” and followed his orders. (Sluss Dep. 75:5–23.)
11 Thus, the exigency of the circumstances also remains in dispute. See LaLonde, 204 12 F.3d at 954.

13 Accordingly, the Court DENIES summary judgment as to the unlawful search 14 of Junior Sialoi’s apartment because genuine issues of material fact exist regarding 15 probable cause, reasonable suspicion, and the exigency of the circumstances. See 16 LaLonde, 204 F.3d at 954.

17 18 4. Qualified Immunity

19 “The doctrine of qualified immunity protects government officials ‘from liability 20 for civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory 21 or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known.’” Pearson v.
22 Callahan, 555 U.S. 223, 231 (2009) (quoting Harlow v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800, 818 23 (1982)). “Qualified immunity balances two important interests—the need to hold 24 public officials accountable when they exercise power irresponsibly and the need to 25 shield officials from harassment, distraction, and liability when they perform their duties 26 reasonably.” Id.

27 In Saucier v. Katz, 533 U.S. 194, 201 (2001), the Supreme Court established a 28 two-prong analysis to determine whether qualified immunity applies. The two-prong

1 analysis considers whether the plaintiff has alleged a violation of a constitutional right 2 and/or whether the right at issue was “clearly established” at the time of the alleged 3 misconduct. Pearson, 555 U.S. at 231-32. To be “clearly established” for the purposes 4 of qualified immunity, “[t]he contours of the right must be sufficiently clear that a 5 reasonable official would understand that what he is doing violates that right.” 6 Anderson v. Creighton, 483 U.S. 635, 640 (1987). Furthermore, the district court has 7 “discretion in deciding which of the two prongs of the qualified immunity analysis 8 should be addressed first in light of the circumstances in the particular case at hand.”
9 Pearson, 555 U.S. at 236.

10 For summary-judgment purposes, the facts must be viewed in the light most 11 favorable to the nonmoving party if there is a genuine dispute over material facts. Scott 12 v. Harris, 550 U.S. 372, 380 (2007) (holding that a video tape proving the plaintiff’s 13 factual story untrue negated a “genuine” dispute of material facts). If facts necessary 14 to decide the issue of qualified immunity are in dispute, then summary judgment 15 granting qualified immunity is not proper. Acosta v. City & Cnty. of San Francisco, 83 16 F.3d 1143, 1147-48 (9th Cir. 1996); Barlow v. Ground, 943 F.2d 1132, 1136 (9th Cir.
17 1991).

18 Defendants argue that all of the police officers are entitled to qualified immunity 19 even “[i]f we assume probable cause did not exist for the arrest of [G.S.]” (Defs.’ Mot.
20 17:22–21:16.) Defendants do not, however, challenge Plaintiffs’ assertion that they 21 adequately assert a violation of a constitutional right and that the right in issue was 22 “clearly established” at the time. (See Pls.’ Opp’n 20:2–22:13; Defs.’ Reply 8:19–9:6.)
23 Rather, Defendants focus on the factual circumstances of the police officers’ encounter 24 with Plaintiffs. (See Defs.’ Reply 8:19–9:6.) But those facts, which must be resolved 25 before determining whether the officers are protected by the doctrine of qualified 26 immunity, remain in dispute. Therefore, granting qualified immunity is improper at this 27 time, and the Court DENIES summary judgment as to qualified immunity. See Acosta, 28 83 F.3d at 1147-48; Barlow, 943 F.2d at 1136.

5. Unconstitutional Custom or Policy

Municipalities are “persons” under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and thus may be liable for causing a constitutional deprivation. Monell v. Dep’t of Soc. Servs., 436 U.S. 658, 690 (1978). Monell liability may arise when a locality has an “official custom or policy” that requires its officers to engage in illegal behavior. Connick v. Thompson, — U.S. —, —, 131 S. Ct. 1350, 1359 (2011). Under Monell, to prevail in a civil action against a local governmental entity, a plaintiff must establish “(1) that he possessed a constitutional right of which he was deprived; (2) that the municipality had a policy; (3) that this policy ‘amounts to deliberate indifference’ to the plaintiff’s constitutional right; and (4) that the policy is the ‘moving force behind the constitutional violation.’” Oviatt By & Through Waugh v. Pearce, 954 F.2d 1470, 1474 (9th Cir.1992) (quoting City of Canton v. Harris, 489 U.S. 378, 389-91 (1989)). A policy is “a deliberate choice to follow a course of action . . . made from among various alternatives by the official or officials responsible for establishing final policy with respect to the subject matter in question.” Id. at 1477 (quoting Pembaur v. City of Cincinnati, 475 U.S. 469, 481 (1986) (plurality opinion)).

A municipality may not be sued under § 1983 solely because an injury was inflicted by its employees or agents. Monell, 436 U.S. at 694. It is only when execution of a government’s policy or custom inflicts the injury that the municipality as an entity is responsible. Id.

Defendants argue that there is no evidence that the City of San Diego has an unconstitutional policy, custom, or practice that resulted in any constitutional violation, entitling them to summary judgment. (Defs.’ Mot. 21:17–22:28.) They add that although Plaintiffs assert various constitutional violations, such as unlawful searches and arrests, the use of excessive force, and the wrongful search of Junior Sialoi’s apartment, Plaintiffs fail to show that the “municipality itself” caused any of the alleged violations of constitutional rights. (Id. at 22:20–28.) In response, Plaintiffs direct the Court’s attention to Sgt. Sluss’ testimony that “pursuant to the city police

1 department's policies and procedures to handcuff anyone who was at this party under 2 these circumstances," and that this would be true "regardless of whether they matched 3 the description of the suspects." (Pls.' Opp'n 22:22–23:5.)

4 Drawing all inferences in favor of the nonmoving party, Plaintiffs' evidence fails 5 to demonstrate a custom or policy that required the police officers, including Sgt. Sluss, 6 to engage in illegal behavior. See Connick, 131 S. Ct. at 1359; Oviatt, 954 F.2d at 7 1477. Plaintiffs' use of selective testimony provides no insight into whether "a 8 deliberate choice to follow a course of action [was] made from among various 9 alternatives for establishing final policy with respect to the subject matter in question."
10 See Pembaur, 475 U.S. at 481 (emphasis added). At best, Sgt. Sluss' statement shows 11 that he believes it was appropriate for Plaintiffs to be arrested and treated as they were 12 during the incident to preserve the peace. Nothing in the statement betrays any 13 reference to a policy or custom of the City of San Diego. Without reference to any 14 information that illustrates what the City of San Diego's policies actually are, this 15 evidence is little more than a reflection of Sgt. Sluss' subjective interpretation of the 16 policy's relationship to the situation at hand. Therefore, the Court GRANTS summary 17 judgment as to the Monell claim.

18 19 B. Negligence

20 The Fourth Amendment reasonableness standard applies to claims that officers 21 were negligent in using excessive force. See Young v. Cnty. of Los Angeles, 655 F.3d 22 1156, 1170 (9th Cir. 2011) (citing Munoz v. City of Union City, 120 Cal. App. 4th 23 1077, 1108-09 (2004)). Unlike § 1983 claims, however, qualified immunity does not 24 insulate police officers for claims brought under California law. Robinson v. Solano 25 Cnty., 278 F.3d 1007, 1016 (9th Cir. 2002) (en banc) ("California denies immunity to 26 police officers who use excessive force in arresting a suspect.").

27 Though Defendants argue that they responded to the 9-1-1 call appropriately by 28 exercising reasonable care throughout encounter with Plaintiffs, genuine issues of 1 material facts remain, making summary judgment inappropriate. The issues include, 2 for example, whether the police officers were justified in searching and arresting 3 Plaintiffs, and whether officers used excessive force, among others discussed in greater 4 detail above. Making a determination regarding negligence would again require 5 determining credibility, weighing evidence, and drawing inferences from facts, all of 6 which are inappropriate for the Court to do in summary judgment. See Anderson, 477

 7 U.S. at 355. Therefore, for the same reasons that the Court denied summary judgment
 8 for the constitutional-violation claims above, the Court also DENIES summary 9 judgment as to negligence. See Young, 2011 WL 3771183, at *12.

11 C. Battery

12 In California, a plaintiff must prove unreasonable force as an element of a battery 13 action in order to impose liability on police officers. Edson v. City of Anaheim, 63 Cal.
 14 App. 4th 1269, 1272 (1998); Cal. Gov't Code § 815.2(a). Such battery claims brought 15 under California law are also analyzed under the Fourth Amendment reasonableness 16 standard. Munoz, 120 Cal. App. 4th at 1102 n.6. And like state-law claims for 17 negligence, § 1983 qualified immunity does not protect officers from battery claims 18 brought under California law. Robinson, 278 F.3d at 1016.

19 Again, as discussed above, Defendants are not entitled to summary judgment for 20 their use of force because whether the application of force was objectively reasonable 21 remains a genuine issue of material fact. See Edson, 63 Cal. App. 4th at 1272.
 22 Therefore, the Court DENIES summary judgment as to battery.

24 D. False Arrest / False Imprisonment³

25 “Under California law, a police officer may be liable for false arrest and false 26 imprisonment[.]” Asgari v. City of Los Angeles, 15 Cal. 4th 744, 757 (1997). The tort 27 ³ “[F]alse arrest’ and ‘false imprisonment’ are not separate torts. False arrest is but one way 28 of committing a false imprisonment, and they are distinguishable only in terminology.” Collins v. City & Cnty. of San Francisco, 50 Cal. App. 3d 671, 673 (1975).

1 of false imprisonment is defined as the “unlawful violation of the personal liberty of 2 another.” Fermino v. Fedco, Inc., 7 Cal. 4th 701, 715 (1994). The confinement must 3 be “without lawful privilege.” Molko v. Holy Spirit Ass’n, 46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1123
 4 (1988). “False arrest or imprisonment . . . relat[es] to conduct that is without valid 5 legal authority[.]” Randle v. City & Cnty. of San Francisco, 186 Cal. App. 3d 449, 456 6 (1986).

7 Though Defendants move for summary judgment as to all of the state claims, 8 they do not explicitly or specifically explain why the Court should rule in its favor for 9 the false arrest / false imprisonment claim. (See Defs.’ Mot. 23:1–24:19.) The most 10 that they say regarding this claim is that “[t]here was no false arrest” in their reply brief.
 11 (Defs.’ Reply 9:20–10:2.) Defendants appear to derive this conclusion from the 12 presumption that “there was probable cause to arrest G.S. and reasonable suspicion to 13 detain the remaining Plaintiffs.” (Id.) However, as the Court discussed above, there 14 are genuine issues of material fact regarding probable cause and reasonable suspicion 15 as justifications for the police officers’ conduct. Therefore, the Court DENIES 16 summary judgment for false arrest / false imprisonment.

17 18 E. California Civil Code § 52.1

19 California Civil Code § 52.1 permits an individual to bring a civil action for 20 interference with his rights under the United States or California Constitutions by 21 threats, intimidation, or coercion. Venegas v. Cnty. of Los Angeles, 153 Cal. App. 4th 22 1230, 1239 (2007). “Section 52.1 does not provide any substantive protections; 23 instead, it enables individuals to sue for damages as a result of constitutional violations.”
 24 Reynolds v. Cnty. of San Diego, 84 F.3d 1162, 1170 (9th Cir. 1996), rev’d on other 25 grounds, Acri v. Varian Assocs., Inc., 114 F.3d 999, 999-1000 (1997). Plaintiffs’ claim 26 under § 52.1 arises from unlawful-seizure and excessive-force claims under the United 27 States Constitution. Consequently, it is evaluated under the reasonableness standard 28 of the Fourth Amendment. See Jones v. Kmart Corp., 17 Cal. 4th 329, 331 (1998) (the

1 elements of claims under California Civil Code § 52.1 are essentially identical to claims 2 under 42 U.S.C. § 1983).

3 Relying on Shoyoye v. County of Los Angeles, 203 Cal. App. 4th 947, 959-60 4 (2012), Defendants argue that under § 52.1, “the elements of threats, intimidation or 5 coercion must be distinct from the underlying allegation of a constitutional violation,” 6 and that Plaintiffs fail to make an adequate showing of the necessary elements of 7 threats, intimidation, or coercion. (Defs.’ Mot. 24:1–19.) Plaintiffs astutely identify 8 this as a broad reading of Shoyoye. See Bass v. City of Fremont, No. C12-4943, 2013
9 WL 891090, at *5 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 8, 2013).

10 In Bass, the district court rejected the broad reading of Shoyoye, stating that such 11 a reading “would, perversely, preclude any section 52.1 action in which the underlying 12 statutory or constitutional violation involved ‘threats, intimidation, or coercion.’” Id.
13 The court continued that “[t]his reading is contrary to the plain language of the statute, 14 which specifically provides for a civil action based on interference with a right “by 15 threats, intimidation, or coercion.” Id. (citing Cal. Civ. Code §52.1(b)). It also 16 concluded that a broad reading of Shoyoye is also contrary to Venegas, “in which the 17 California Supreme Court held that section 52.1 provides redress for ‘threats, 18 intimidation, or coercion that interferes with a constitutional or statutory right,’ and 19 accordingly, permitted a claim to proceed based on allegations of interference with the 20 plaintiffs’ right to be free from unreasonable searches and seizures.” Id. This Court 21 rejects Defendants’ interpretation of Shoyoye, and adopts the Bass Court’s reasoning 22 and conclusion.⁴ See Bass, 2013 WL 891090, at *5-6.

23 Defendants also briefly argue that “any claims for a violation of Civil Code 24 section 52.1 that flow from the reasonable detentions and reasonable use of force . . .
25 fail as a matter of law.” (Defs.’ Reply 9:26–10:2.) However, because the reasonableness 26 of the arrest / detentions and the use of force remain in dispute, the Court cannot 27

28 ⁴ The Court notes that Defendants did not address the application of Shoyoye in their reply brief, which suggests that they may have abandoned the argument.

1 conclude that Plaintiffs' § 52.1 claim fails as a matter of law. Therefore, summary 2 judgment is not appropriate at this time.

3 Accordingly, the Court DENIES summary judgment as to Plaintiffs' claim for 4 civil-rights violations brought under California Civil Code § 52.1

6 IV. CONCLUSION & ORDER

7 In light of the foregoing, the Court GRANTS IN PART and DENIES IN 8 PART Defendants' motion for summary judgment. (Doc. 36.) Specifically, the Court 9 GRANTS summary judgment as to Plaintiffs' Monell claim brought under 42 U.S.C.
10 § 1983, and DENIES summary judgment as to all other remaining issues.
